Record Keeping Requirements:

- Maintain receipts and documentation for all purchases
- HSAs do not require submission of receipts to the custodian, but you must keep proof
- FSAs typically require more detailed substantiation from the employer
- Retain documentation for IRS audit purposes (generally 3-7 years)

Substantiation:

- Save itemized receipts showing the nature of the expense
- Retain explanations of benefits (EOBs) from insurance providers
- Document provider credentials for professional services
- Keep prescriptions for prescription medications

Letters of Medical Necessity:

- Some borderline expenses require a Letter of Medical Necessity (LMN) from a licensed provider
- Examples include: gym memberships for specific conditions, supplements for treatment, massage therapy
- Request LMN directly from your treating physician
- Submit to HSA/FSA administrator per plan instructions

Plan Variations

Rules and eligible items vary significantly by:

- Employer plan design
- FSA administrator policies
- HSA custodian interpretations
- State regulations
- Individual plan document terms

Always consult your specific plan documents and administrator before making determination of eligibility.
